Norton Recounts Story of Young Stallion in Arizona Desert

HAD TO BUY WATER

Windlass With Two Barrels Used to Bring It Up From Deep Well

Editor's Note: This is the third of a series of nine letters written by S. G. Norton, 520 North Hervey street, this city, to Sam E. McMath, former rube man now living at Bisbee, Ariz. in which Mr. Norton tells thrilling chapters from his life in the 80's. Star readers will remember Mr. McMath's two series of letters on his experiences along the Mexican border—but this time it is Mr. Norton who is telling the story.

Dear Sam: Tucson, Arizona, as I first knew it, wasn't entirely without its refinements of civilization, but lawlessness was rampant. The right of might was the only law respected by cowboys, cattle thieves, miners and Mexican smugglers who gathered there to enjoy themselves in riotous pleasure.

The Southern Pacific, the one and only railroad supplying Tucson, was at that time a trans-continental line. Far-sighted men with capital who were to eventually make a city spring up and flourish on the desert had not yet begun to arrive, and opportunities of employment were offered to a tenderfoot boy like myself, inexperienced in the life of those times.

He Gets a Job

One day Charlie Laboree came to town looking for a man to work at his place, called Desert Station, 21 miles west of Tucson. I got the job.

Desert Station consisted of several adobe buildings and stock sheds, surrounded by a high adobe wall that had been erected for protection against marauding Apache Indians. During the days that overland stages ran to California, Desert Station had been a busy place, but after the coming of the railroad, business slumped and Laboree acquired mining interests in the Papago and Santa Rita ranges, to which he devoted the greater part of his time. He employed me to look after the station during his frequent absences, and to take care of what few travelers who came that way.

After instruction in my duties Laboree departed for his mine, promising me a cook if he could find one. He either failed in his efforts or forgot his promise, and I was forced to exercise my talents in culinary art. Beans, dried fruit, baking-powder bread and coffee constituted my bill of fare.

Ford Sales Session Is Held at Barlow

G. A. Brusch Conducts Training Course in Million-Car Program

Ford salesmen of southwest Arkansas are attending a two-day session of sales training at Hotel Barlow, it was announced from the hotel Tuesday by George A. Brusch, sales promotion manager from the Memphis branch of Ford Motor company.

Mr. Brusch is in charge of the training work.

He has just returned from Detroit, where he was thoroughly instructed in the execution of the company's plan to sell one million Ford V-8 cars and trucks during 1935.

Every Ford branch in the United States is conducting such a training school for Ford salesmen to enable them to intelligently present the advantages and features of the Ford V-8 cars for 1935.

The program is planned for 12 months and requires certain qualifications on the part of the salesman who will become a member of the "Spartan" club. Dealers, salesmen and owners of the Ford V-8 are expected to benefit as the result of this training, Mr. Brusch said Tuesday.

Liquor Denounced by Sardis Church

Legalization Move Opposed by Resolution of Membership

A resolution denouncing proposals in the Arkansas legislature to legalize sale of liquor, was adopted Sunday, January 27, by the membership of Sardis Methodist church, Nashville, Route Two, Hempstead county.

The resolution follows: Whereas there is now pending before the legislature of our state a bill for the legal sale of whiskey and to repeal our dry laws of many years standing; and whereas we believe the license sale of liquor has always proved detrimental to the welfare of our people; and whereas the drinking of liquor produces a demoralizing effect upon the people, placing the lives of both the drinker and those with whom he may come in contact in grave peril; and whereas the sale of liquor and the drinking of the same is forbidden by the moral laws of the universe and has been stamped by the American fathers as a great curse to the nations of the world;

Therefore it is resolved: First: That we of the Sardis Methodist church, Hempstead county, Arkansas, condemn any attempt of our legislature to repeal the dry laws of our beloved state.

Second: That we of the Sardis Methodist church, Hempstead county hereby petition our representatives and senators in the present legislature to use their influence to maintain our present dry laws and to vote to defeat pending legislation now before the legislature.

Third: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the honorable members of the legislature from Hempstead county that they may be informed as to our feeling in this matter.

Respectfully submitted, Signed: O. E. Holmes, pastor; J. R. Reed, E. A. Harris, Roy Lyons, members of the board of stewards.

Racing Bill Is Ordered to Committee for Time Being

Land Redemption Act Is Approved by Both Houses

Settle for One Year Past-Due Taxes and the 1933 Account

UNEMPLOYABLES AID

Joint Project With U. S. Will Be Argued by House Wednesday

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The house Tuesday approved a senate bill extending land redemption privileges for another year, and received Governor Furell's unopposed aid - administration measure, which was placed on the calendar for action Wednesday.

The redemption bill would permit the redemption of property forfeited for non-payment of taxes, if the owner paid the taxes for one of the years during which it was delinquent, plus taxes for 1933.

The unemployables bill would set up a state department of public welfare and commission of 11 members to supervise the distribution of aid to unemployables.

Then senate argued most of the morning on a concurrent resolution to memorialize congress for speedy passage of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage bill.

Act for Unemployed

LITTLE ROCK.—A Department of Public Welfare, administration of which would be in charge of a commission of 11 members appointed by the governor, would be created by a bill, enactment of which, Governor Furell advised the legislature Monday, would result in the federal government, temporarily continuing aid for unemployables after Thursday.

A special message from the executive was received in the house and senate Monday, and it is expected that the bill which he recommended will be introduced today. Its provisions were made public at the governor's office.

While Harry L. Hopkins, national FERA administrator, announced several weeks ago that no further relief for unemployables would be forthcoming from the federal government after this month, the governor informed the legislators that prompt passage of the bill would insure continuation of such help to unemployables as is now being rendered by the FERA, at least until March 1, and probably until the state has had ample opportunity to raise necessary funds.

Summary of Bill

The bill provides for appointment by the governor of a Public Welfare Commission for overlapping terms of five years, two members to serve for one year, two for two years, two for three years, two for four years and two for five years. Their successors would be appointed for full five-year terms. They would serve without pay except for expenses incurred in attending commission meetings. These would be held at least twice each year and at other times, subject to the call of the commissioner of public welfare.

An Executive Committee of not less than three nor more than five members would be vested with "full powers and authority to act on all matters for the commission," and the commissioner of public welfare would be chosen by this committee and his salary fixed by it. He would serve as executive secretary of the commission and to act as the agent of both the commission and the committee in administering the proposed act.

Board for Each County

A Public Welfare Board would be appointed in each county, the appointments to be made by the county judge, sheriff, county clerk, circuit clerk and county treasurer. Members of the county boards would serve without pay and would be subject to approval of the state commission. The County Board is charged with the following duties:

To co-operate with the state commission; to execute rules and regulations of the state commission, within the county; to employ and fix the salaries of local employees; to "determine and provide for unemployables in the county under the rules and regulations and in the classes prescribed by the state commission;" to "receive, disburse and account for all funds provided for that purpose and file a complete report of its activities when called upon by the state commission."

Definition of "Unemployable."

An unemployable is defined as one who is physically or mentally incapable of making a living at available employment.

The emergency clause provides that the act shall become effective immediately on its passage and shall be in force for two years.

Sections 8135 to 8163, inclusive, of Crawford & Moses Digest, providing for establishment and maintenance of county poor houses, would be repealed.

Life Sentence of Woman Is Upheld

Mrs. Lida Crow Conspired to Murder Miller County Mailman

LIDA CROW of Miller county was not present at the scene of the murder of Thomas E. Pearson, rural mail carrier, last June, the Arkansas Supreme Court Monday sustained a verdict sentencing her to life imprisonment in connection with his slaying.

The court adhered to previous opinions that aperson may be convicted as a principal, although not actually present at the scene of the crime when it is committed.

Testimony showed that, although Mrs. Crow was sitting with her child on a blanket in the woods several hundred yards from the hold-up murder of the rural letter carrier, she had conspired with Elmore Smith and Paul Favors, the man with whom she was said to be living, to rob Pearson.

Smith pleaded guilty and turned state's evidence against Mrs. Crow and Favors, testifying that he shot Pearson in a struggle for possession of the gun used in the hold-up, while Favors and Mrs. Crow remained near the car 345 yards away in the woods.

The automobile had been used to take the conspirators to the place where Pearson was killed, and when Mrs. Crow was arrested the gun with which she shot was in the pocket of the car.

Both Smith and Favors received life sentences for the murder.

Liquor Is Issue in 6 Southern States

Church Organizations Draw Up Lines for Prohibition Defense

ATLANTA.—(AP)—As liquor law repeal advocates in half a dozen long-dry Southern states pressed numerous legislative measures to the front they were faced Tuesday with growing opposition.

In four of the six states where measures have been introduced to change existing liquor laws the opposition have served notice that organized action has already started.

In Arkansas the State Baptist convention already has taken the initiative in organizing the fight against liquor legalization.

Quintuplet Photos Presented in Star

NEA Feature Syndicate Pays Big Price for World Rights

As a result of one of the greatest "picture scoops" of recent years, the photographic story of the famous Pienme quintuplets will appear exclusively in Hope Star.

The story of how The Star obtained these pictures through NEA Service, Inc., is an interesting one.

When the quintuplets were born, the parents, no less than the rest of the world, were stunned by the miraculous event. But Ovila Dianne, the father, was faced with the stern fact that in addition to his five older children, he must now support on his rocky little farm these five new daughters, who, to survive at all, must have the most meticulous care.

That is expensive, a prospect to dismay any parent, even in better circumstances than these French-Canadian agents.

Uses Oral Phrase Like the Text in Lindbergh Notes

Prosecutor Scores Quickly With Comparison to the Jury

HOME LIFE PROBED

State Fires Prying Questions at Accused Kidnap-Slayer

Copyright Associated Press

FLEMINGTON, N. J.—(AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann on the witness stand Tuesday uttered a phrase almost exactly like the phrases used in two of the 14 Lindbergh ransom notes.

The prosecutor immediately seized upon the incident to emphasize the prisoner's method of speech.

Hauptmann was still undergoing cross-examination as recess halted the trial in mid-afternoon.

As Hauptmann began his second day of grueling cross-examination, indications came out that the state has an important rebuttal witness to say that Hauptmann was mysterious and evasive about the money kept in his home.

Hauptmann was made to answer prying questions about his home and habits, and especially about a photograph in which Attorney General Wilentz hinted much of the money was kept.

Wilentz brought up the matter of the disturbance made several days ago by Hauptmann's wife, and accused Hauptmann of staging the incident. The German denied it.

Hauptmann Weakens

FLEMINGTON, N. J.—(AP)—Bruno Hauptmann, writing under a driving cross-examination, fought Monday with desperation to keep his story from the witness stand at his trial for murdering the Lindbergh baby.

Accused of lies, he twice cried "Stop that!" at his relentless inquisitor, Attorney General David T. Wilentz.

He admitted he lied when he was held in New York but when Wilentz shouted: "Lies, lies, about Lindbergh ransom money!" the prisoner shot back: "Well, you lied to me, too."

Throughout the day's ordeal, Hauptmann, perspiring, white-faced and often faltering, insisted he was innocent of the kidnapping, the baby's murder, the cruel ransom hoax.

"It is," he protested, "I feel innocent and I am innocent and that keeps me the power to stand up."

Admits Falsehoods

But he admitted he told "not the truth" when he was arrested last September and grilled about the ransom money he had pocketed and hidden in his garage, that he lied when he told District Attorney Samuel Foley of the Bronx that he saw "Jasie" numbers on a closet board.

He denied, "positive," that he wrote Dr. John F. Condon's address and telephone number on the board; when the elderly Bronx schoolmaster was negotiating for payment of the $50,000 ransom.

Confronted by crude sketches of a ladder, the pages of his own account book, he denied calmly, with waxen face, that he put them there.

Wilentz drew from Hauptmann the admission that he didn't count the more than $14,000 in ransom bills when, he claims, he found them in a shoebox left in his keeping by Isador Fisch, now dead.

They were not all counted for two weeks, the prisoner said, because they were "wet." And he didn't tell his wife, Anne, about the "find," he said.

He denied he rushed into the street from a restaurant when he heard a radio report that the body of Baby Lindbergh had been found in a New Jersey thicket.

Hauptmann fought stubbornly. Wilentz sought to show that his own misapprehension was like that of the attorney general hinted he might have planned the kidnapping when the baby was born.

"I didn't even know the Lindbergh child was born," said Hauptmann.

Once he smiled in painful transitory triumph when Wilentz asked him to spell "signature," one of the key words of the ransom notes, and he spelled "s-i-n-g-a-t-u-r-e," and he spelled it correctly.

On Verge of Admission

The atmosphere of the old courtroom was plainly antipathetic to the pale German carpenter, but he seemed in new awareness of the undercurrent of hostility and the palpable circus effects injected by the visiting celebrities and out-of-towners, gay, uttering the women in mink coats, the men in wisecracking tail.

There were times when he seemed on the brink of an admission that would settle definitely the question of his guilt in the minds of the eight men and four women jurors who sat through the long day, listening tensely to the unbroken dialogue. When court adjourned he sat with on the stand, and will return Tuesday for perhaps another half-day of examination.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Dowdiness With Dignity

There probably isn't a woman in all the world who doesn't want to be considered glamorous. Regardless of how many other nice things are said, she gets a special thrill whenever anyone even intimates that there's an air of glamour about her.

The dictionary says that glamour is a noun, meaning charm on the eyes, causing them to see things differently from what they are in reality. An American designer who, by the way, is glamorous herself, insists that glamour is what makes a person stand out as a distinctly different individual. I think the young couturier's theory is probably a little more helpful to women who go in quest of the elusive trait. If you take the dictionary's definition literally you may start thinking that in trying to be glamorous you are replacing it with the illusion of something you are not. This, of course, is wrong. On the contrary, as the designer hints, the more individual you are, the more glamorous you are apt to have. In other words, be yourself!

Remember that dowdiness is the antithesis of glamour. The most charming personality in the world can't make up for a dingy neck, soiled or unpressed clothes, stringy hair and makeup that is haphazardly applied. You feel better and have a more confident outlook when you know perfectly well that you're immaculately turned-out. And the minute you have a little swell of personal pride in your heart, your chances of being truly glamorous are doubled and re-doubled.

NEXT: Another Joe Auer exercise.

HARRY GRAYSON

Southern League managers and players say hitting is the only question mark attached to Boze Berger, the young second baseman upon whom the Cleveland Indians are banking so heavily. He does everything else in major league style.

Berger showed considerable improvement at the plate last season, compiling an average of .313 for New Orleans and driving in 36 runs.

Berger was prominently mentioned as an All-American halfback during his college days after twice running through Yale teams for touchdowns that enabled Maryland to win. He was an All-Southern center in basketball. He weighs 190 pounds and stands 6 feet 2 inches.

Southern Leaguers expect half of the 18 players their circuit is shipping to the big show to make the grade. Five of six going to AA loops should stay, and three of those are tabbed as possessing the ingredients of major league performers.

Al Milner, a potential Lefty Grove, going from New Orleans to Cleveland, is a fine prospect, but the dope is that he is not ready for the more select company, despite the fact that he won more than 20 games. He lacks control, must improve his fielding, and perfect a move to first base.

Galehouse Ready
Southern Leaguers assert that Clay Bryant sold by New Orleans to the Chicago Cubs, is not a major league pitcher. The tip is that Bryant should be converted into an outfielder. He is a very good hitter and fast.

Dennis Galehouse, a six-foot, two-inch 190-pound right-hander taken from New Orleans by Cleveland, is declared fit.

Shortstop Roy Hughes, whom Cleveland is bringing up from the Pelicans for utility purposes, is a great fielder, but only a fair hitter. It is explained that Hughes requires additional experience.

Southern Leaguers tell you that the Cleveland club will be disappointed if it is relying upon Greek George, a 190-pound six-footer, to help Frankie Pytlak and Glenn Myatt behind the bat. George needs more seasoning.

Epps, the reformed flycatcher graduating from Birmingham to Pittsburgh as a catcher, should be returned to the minors and caught regularly. He has every appearance of an outstanding hitter.

Southpaw Casey, landed by the Cubs from Atlanta, was one of the best young pitchers in the Southern League. He should do very well, but an other year in slower society would benefit him no end.

Linker's Arm Problem
Pitched Ed Linker figures to help Washington provided life returns to the arm that went dead on him toward the close of the 1934 campaign. Linker, handcuffed Chattanooga's opposition last summer.

Lefty Cohen, also making the jump from Chattanooga to Washington, must get more spin on his curve.

Catcher Holbrook, accompanied by Linker and Cohen, is a brilliant recruit.

Pittsburgh gets Harry Struss, a small right-hander, from Little Rock. Struss obtains blazing speed from a remarkable arm.

Browne, a left-hand hitting and throwing outfielder and first baseman, makes the same hop, but is not likely to linger. He is a jack of all trades, having formerly pitched for Louisville.

National League followers saw enough of Outfielder Hank Leiber and Phil Wainwright with the Giants last fall to know that the former lacks the only dash and that the latter will have to polish up his fielding to remain

YOUR HEALTH

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Your Health Depends On Your Clothing.

Few people realize the importance of clothing in relationship to health and disease.

Human beings living in isolated places under warm conditions can do without clothing ordinarily, but they must wear some coverings, if only for the sake of modesty. From what we know of the value of sunlight for the human body, there is no more healthfulness produced from exposing the complete body to sunlight than exposing all except portions that might be covered by a breech, clout or diaper.

However, under conditions of winter, such as exist in most of the United States, nudism is neither comfortable nor healthful. For this reason, human beings protect themselves from bad weather by housing and clothing.

The disadvantages of housing and clothing lie in the fact that they keep the skin away from fresh air and sunlight; hence it is advisable for those who are too constantly covered to obtain an occasional dose of artificial sunlight and, by suitable bathing and airing, to keep the skin in good condition.

You should remember that the ultraviolet rays of the sun, when taken in excess, can do as much harm, if not more harm, than is developed by avoiding sunlight altogether.

We lose water from the body through the skin. The body is a self-regulating mechanism and adjusts itself to the loss of heat. It is advisable, therefore, at all seasons to wear next to the skin some porous, pliable material which allows rapid removal of moisture from the surface of the body.

In cold weather, this first covering may be covered by additional clothing, with as many layers as necessary for warmth.

For the coldest weather, any material, such as a sleather, which permits air to pass through only very slowly, makes the best body covering. Except for this outside covering, which holds the layer of warm air, clothing should be soft.

In winter, it is especially important not to wear tight clothing, which will interfere with circulation of the blood and cramp the body movements. Eskimos and other people who live in the Arctic zone wear soft, pliable moccasins instead of stiff heavy shoes worn in the temperate zone.

While it is generally conceded that men dress less hygienically than women, because their clothing is heavy and permits of less circulation of air, and because they wear tight collars, garters, and belts, the clothing worn by women has other hazards.

Women's shoes are probably the least substantial and least healthful of any garments worn.

The second complaint about women's clothing is the fact that their dresses usually are made of material not easily cleaned or washed, and because of the sparseness of their coverings, these materials are in almost constant contact with the skin. Investigations have shown definitely the accumulation of bacteria on such garments, and explain the reason for infection of the skin on the backs of many women.

A BOOK A DAY

By BRUCE CATTION

He Was Born To Be Blessed by a Woman—Joshua Todd—is Novel About a Very Unlucky Man

There must be quite a few harassed males who will enjoy reading Fulton Oursler's new novel, "Joshua Todd." It is pretty doubtful, however, if their wives will think much of it.

This book is a study of the way in which women can raise merry Ned with a man's life.

Joshua Todd is a young chap in a small town in Maryland. He is ambitious, energetic, and intelligent, starting out as printer's devil in the local newspaper shop, he presently finds himself editor of the paper and a leading citizen of the community.

But Josh, for all his good works, is just a sucker for a straight left. He gets himself married, to a local charmer, and she puts him through the hoop without ceasing. She is one of the horseleech's daughters which Scripture tells us about; she has to have a maid, a new house, fine dresses, an up-to-date car, and all the other trimmings.

So poor Josh is kept with his nose everlastingly at the grindstone. He works his health and nerves to a frazzle trying to get out from behind the eight-ball which his wife keeps rolling in front of him.

And at last, when he gets wise and leaves the woman, what does he do? Bless himself and go his way alone? Not at all; he promptly ties up with another female, who, in her own way, proceeds to put him through the hoop all over again.

For Joshua Todd was one of those lads who were just born to be bossed by some woman or other. You've probably met one or two in your travels.

Published by Farrar and Rinehart, the book sells for $2.50.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Baby Is Normal If Slow

Not long ago two mothers were talking about their little boys who were near of an age, about two and a half years old.

One was a business woman who had to be away all day every day except Sunday. The other cared for her baby herself and had no maid.

The business girl naturally had to have someone to do the work, and look after her baby. There was no one else to stay at the house and play mother, but she had managed to discover that rare article, a combination housekeeper and nurse.

Their boys were—only children, and being so nearly equal in months, health and parents (these young couples being well-educated and of about the same means) it offered a splendid chance for comparison.

Now the little fellow bereft of his mama each day was slow about talking. And he had been lazy about walking, too. The other was a veritable cricket, chattering and never still a waking minute.

Mother Is Worried
"I am beginning to be worried," said Mother Number 1. "Bobby seems so far behind your Ted. Sometimes I think I'll have to take him to have a thorough examination somewhere and find out what's wrong."

She was frank, wasn't she, for a mother? But then there is little nonsense about the brisk modern girl, even where her baby is concerned.

Her friend laughed. "Just what I was thinking about Ted," she said. "I'm beginning to wonder how I ever happened to have a perpetual-motion machine who sleeps with one eye open for fear he will miss something."

In the end both agreed that their children were normal and sweet and the dearest things in the world. Which they were. There was absolutely not a thing the matter with either of them.

But why this difference in development? Why did Teddy seem to be too far along for his own good and why did Bobby appear so backward as to alarm his mother?

Contrast in Companionship
Well, the nurse with all the work to do and feeling that little Bobby was safer in his pen than anywhere else, kept him pretty well fenced in most of the time. And naturally he was alone because her duties took her out of the room. She was not a talkative person either, to the baby played with his toys and stayed very, very silent. The same was true of his muscular development. He couldn't act as though he were wound up when he just sat all day.

The other tot's mother had him with her, naturally, except for a few hours a day when he just had to be penned

Bar Reform Bill Provokes Debate

Opponents Declare It Is Sponsored by Corporation Friends

LITTLE ROCK.—The state bar "integration" bill was characterized by one group of lawyers as an iniquitous plan to give the corporations a club over honest lawyers who try to protect the people's rights and was defended by another group as a plan to clean up the bar to which no honest lawyer should object, at a hearing in the house chamber Monday night before the joint judiciary committee of the senate and house.

After hearing a dozen speeches, the committee adjourned at 10 p. m. without taking action on the bill. It was said that another meeting will be held soon for members of the committee to discuss the measure and to decide what recommendation will be made.
Judge Joseph M. Hill of Fort Smith, a member of the committee from Arkansas Bar association which defended the bill, was the first speaker. He outlined provisions of the bill, which sets up a self-governing plan for the bar, with all discipline and discipline proceeding subject to review by the courts.

Dave Partain of Van Buren, J. F.
Boyle, Lawrence county farmer; Kenoth Coffelt of Benton, Prosecuting Attorney Roy Richardson of Van Ridgely and J. Resser Venable of Little Rock.

Partain said the proposed plan for incorporation of the bar is similar to a law in effect in Oklahoma, "where every ex-horse thief in the state is punishing law." He said it now is unlawful for a lawyer to do the things enacted in the bill as causes for disbarment, but objected to disbarment cases being heard by a committee of lawyers and contended that such charges should be heard before a jury.
He said the "bill is a club for the corporations to hold over a lawyer who might dare to represent a client in a suit against corporations."

Many offers came to the Dionnes,

His wisdom has been justified by the bright, healthy condition of the quintuplets today. They are fast de-

1 1/2 Millions of U.S. Bonds Vanish

Bank Messenger Loses Wallet While Visiting
Another Office

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The disappearance of $1,456,000 in government bonds on consignment from the Bank of Manhattan, was reported Monday night to police.

A messenger and two guards, entrusted with delivery of the bonds and who reported their loss to the bank, were detained for questioning.
The bonds were fully covered by insurance. Government agencies, bankers and dealers were notified immediately to stop payment.

Neither the bank nor police would give the names of the messenger and the guards. G. Alexander, a vice president, said the messenger had been on employ of the bank for several years.

When the messenger left the bank, he had a wallet of deliveries—containing the missing securities—and his first stop was at Devine & Co.

The vice president said the messenger told the following story:

At Devine & Co., the messenger took from his wallet the packages for delivery there. He stepped away from the cashier's window in the small delivery room and waited for his receipt. He placed the wallet on a counter ledge as he waited.

The cashier called: "Bank of Manhattan, your check is ready." The messenger stepped up to the cashier's window, got his receipt and stepped back for the package and found it gone.

through NEA Service, Inc., exclusive pictures of their development.

When this arrangement expired recently, representatives of other large American newspaper agencies rushed to Canada to bid for future rights to these absorbing pictures.

After long negotiations, NEA Service again secured the rights, paying a price believed higher than ever before paid for a single picture feature, and one that assured the parents of freedom from worry about the care and future of their rapidly growing daughters.

When the wonder babies, fed with an eye-dropper, survived those first days and weeks of their precarious life, it was considered by medical authorities a near-miracle. Each succeeding week the wonder grew.

But the greater wonder is at hand.
The marvel of bare survival is being displayed by the wonder of development under ideal conditions of care and surroundings. As a study of what can be done by environment for children born under adverse circumstances, this story is without a peer.

Under the personal supervision of Dr. Dufosse, who will see that nothing endangers the babies' welfare, the story will be told in pictures, the greatest baby pictures ever made available for newspaper publication.

These pictures, covering the most interesting periods of infant growth, including the first teeth, the first step,
the first birthday, and how they are cared for, will be made available exclusively in Hope by The Star, through its relationship with NEA Service.

PATMAN, BELGRANO

Last year but this year it is behind a proposal introduced by Representative Vinson, Democrat, Kentucky, which leaves the method of payment to the Treasury.

Patman told Taylor Monday that the Legion measure was a "bankers' bonus bill," reminding him that Frank N.
Belgrano Jr., national commander of the Legion, has or has had, banking connections.

Taylor replied that the Legion has endorsed the bill (it thought) and the best opportunity of becoming law. He indicated there would be no change in the Legion's attitude that would put the organization behind the Pat-man bill.

The president opposes cash payment of the bonus. The current row has led some administration leaders to believe his ideas may prevail or that a satisfactory compromise would be worked out.

"Their (the Vinson) bill certainly is a bankers' bonus bill. The bankers would get $2,000,000,000 in interest on the bonds and the soldiers would get $2,000,000,000 in cash."

After Belgrano was told of Patman's speech at Cleveland Sunday night in which he accused Legion leaders of having jeopardized the bonus bill's chances, Belgrano issues a statement in which he said:

"Congressman Patman now has made it obvious beyond further misunderstanding that he is more interested in obtaining passage of his new mandatory theories than he is in having the government pay its debts to the World war veterans."

He contended that the Patman bill had passed the House twice, but said:
"And right there it has stopped."
"It has just as consistently been defeeted in the Senate," he added. "The World war veterans do not want a repetition of failure this time."

The World's Most Famous Babies at Eight Months

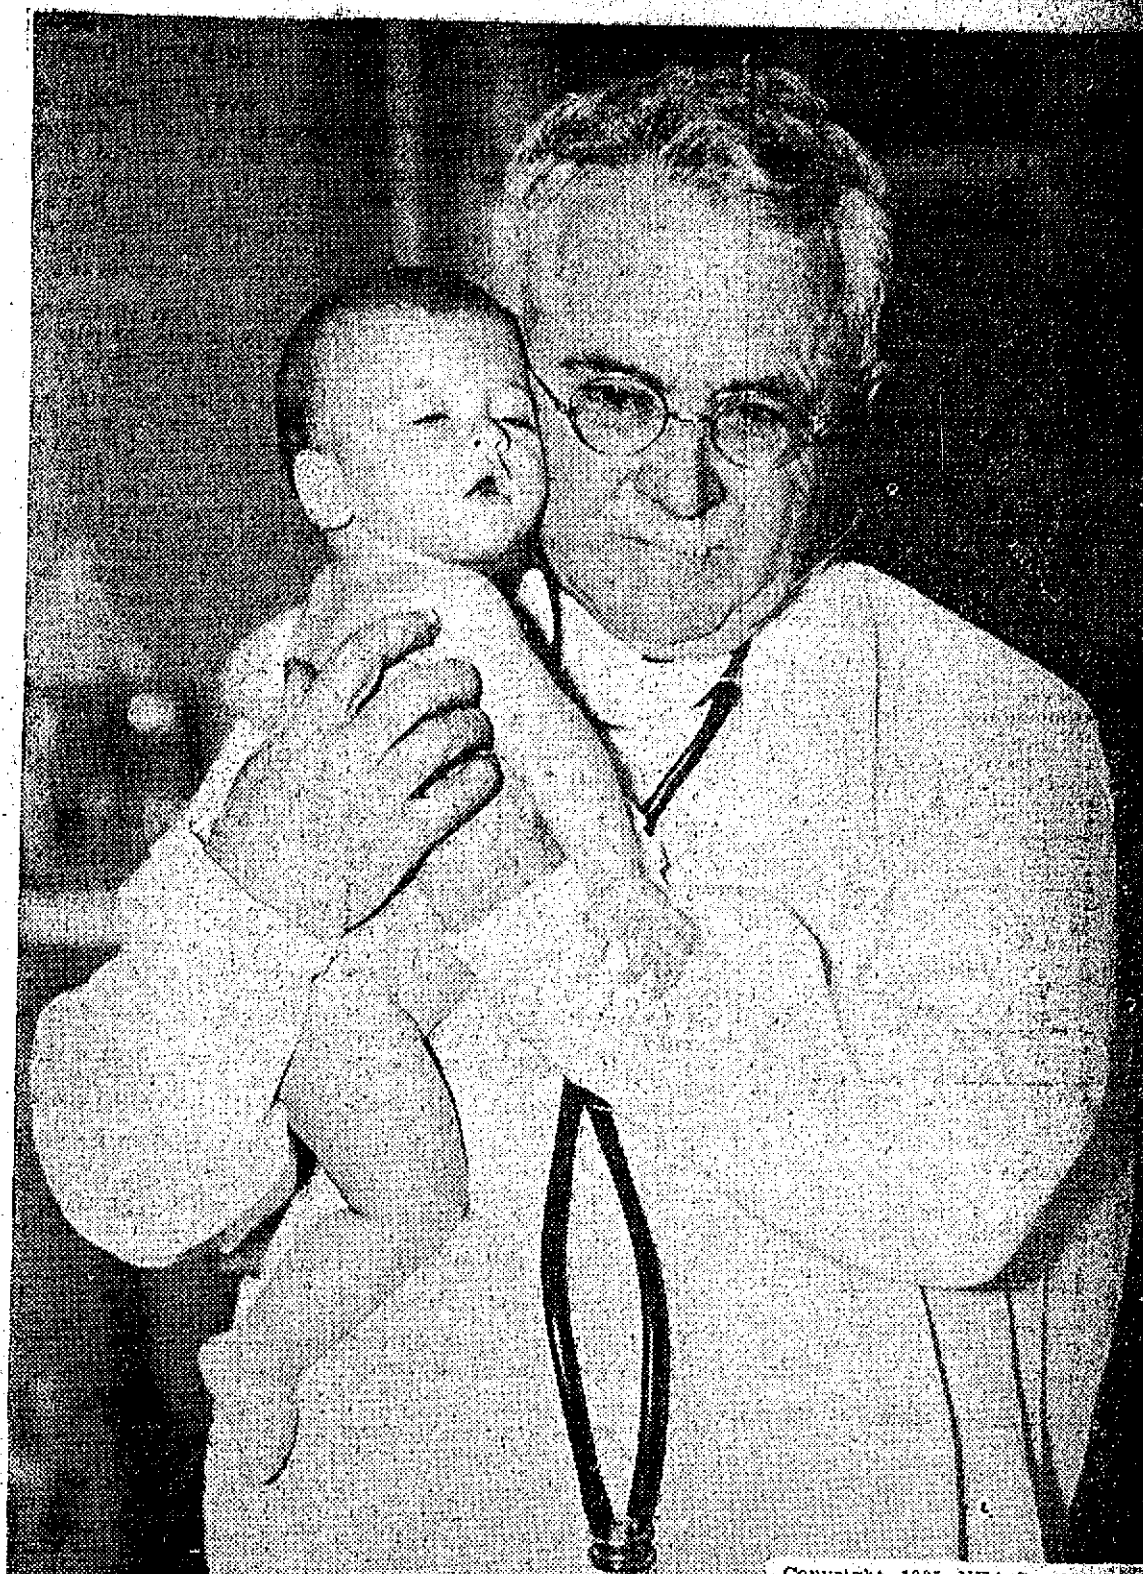

Ready for anything that this strange new world may bring them, the bright eyes of the Dionne quintuplets gaze expectantly. Except for Emelie, who modestly ducked her head as the camera snapped, Marie, left, and Annette, Yvonne and Cecile seem to enjoy the proceedings.

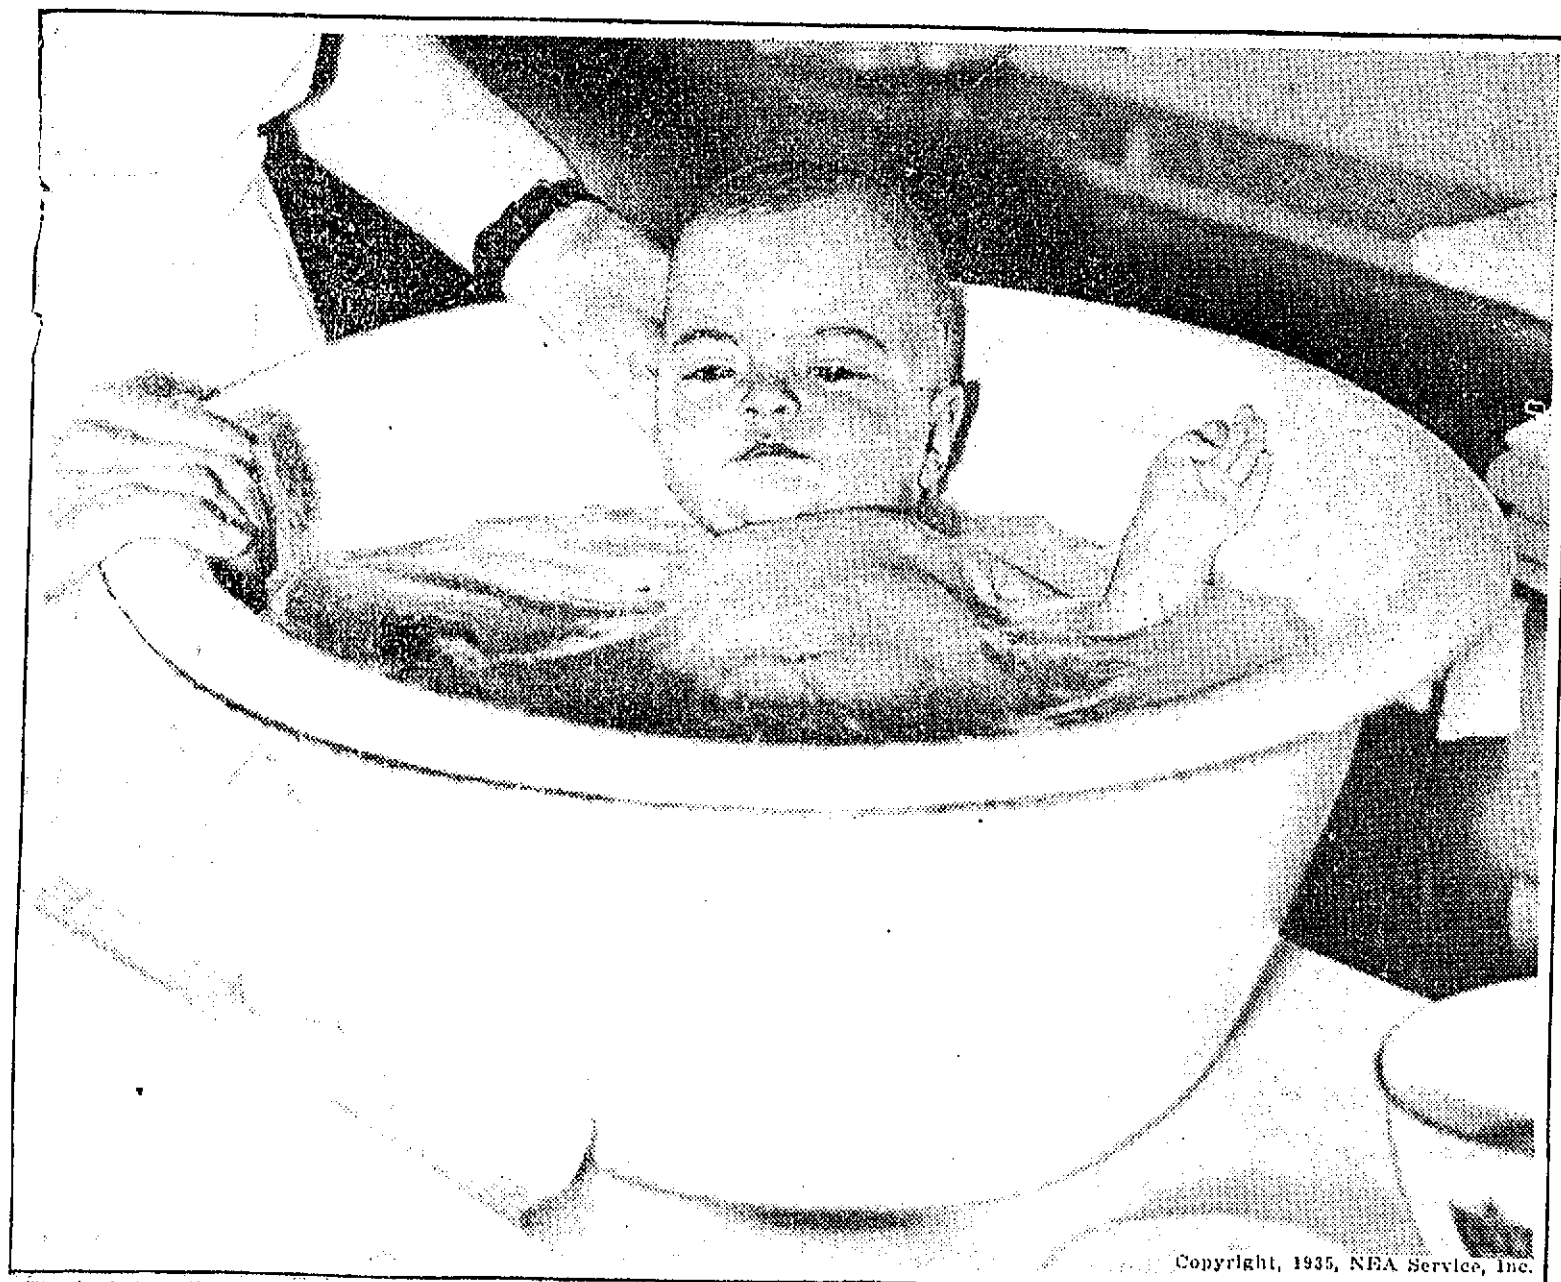

"Whoops! Up I go! A big girl like me's not afraid!" Yvonne seems to say. Even the daring young man on the flying trapeze never got a greater kick out of flying through the air than Yvonne Dionne expresses as Nurse Leroux lifts her high before the camera.

The Dionne quintuplets are growing up — and growing cuter every minute — as you'll observe in these remarkable photos, first of the array which will appear exclusively in The Star during the next year or more under the new contract recently negotiated with the babies' guardians by NEA Service, Inc. Make sure you get your Star regularly to avoid missing a single picture in this superb camera record of the world's most famous babies.

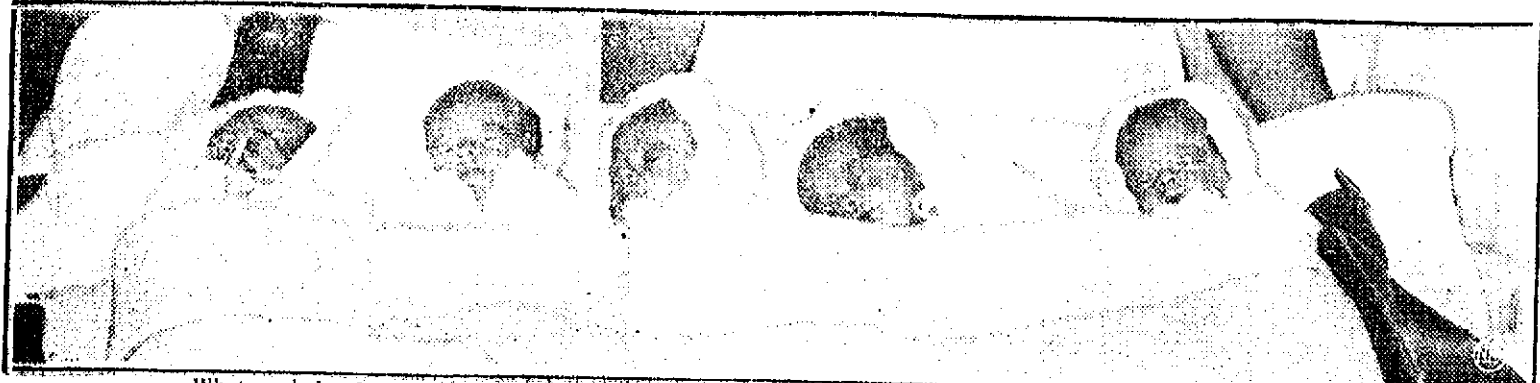

Utterly contented in an overwhelming love and trust, Yvonne snuggles up to the doctor, whose wisdom and patience brought the quintuplets safely through to life and health. What a contrast is here the innocent face of the babe and the graying hair and wise eyes of Dr. Dafoe. Yet some fathomable understanding seems to pass between them.

The bath is still an exciting adventure in the daily life of the quintuplets, and Yvonne, her head sustained by nurse's firm, gentle hand, seems to be enjoying it to the full. The olive-oil bath days are over now, and the "quins" get regular "grown-up" baths.

Never were there four brighter eyes or two softer or more roly-poly little bodies than Annette and Yvonne present here at eight months old. Note the tiny bracelet-chains, which hold identification tags so there may be no mistake as to who's who.

What a whale of a difference a few months make! At left are the famous Dionne quintuplets at just above three months old. Tiny beings, only beginning to look like normal babies, but look at them, in the right picture, as they are today at eight months! Ever see any brighter, happier, more healthy-looking little girls than Marie, Emelie, Cecile, Annette and Yvonne?

Sales Tax Bill Is Held in Committee

New Switch Proposed in State and Local School Millage Rates

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The probability of delay in the senate's consideration of a sales tax bill developed here Monday following the failure of the senate committee on education to take action on the bill.

The committee also deferred consideration of a proposed constitutional amendment changing the state property tax millage for schools from 3 to 5 at the same time lowering the local district tax from 18 to 12 mills.

Both in the house and senate, talk of bringing up horse-race betting and liquor bills this week increased.

Sales Tax Hearing
LITTLE ROCK.—Preparatory to making a report to the senate Monday as a special order of business, the committee on education of the senate heard views of retail merchants regarding the proposed sales tax at a conference Sunday night.

Provisions of the bill referred to the committee, S. B. No. 85, by Hall, providing for a three per cent sales levy, and amendment were discussed.

The merchants suggested there be no transportation tax on goods sold to be resold, and asked the committee to consider provisions to provide that articles sold to be carried out of the state either not to be taxed or taxed lower than those taxed in the state where the articles are taken. It was said that if the bill is not so amended much trade might go to neighboring states.

Refunding of taxes on articles sold to state or federal institutions also was discussed. The bill now provides the tax on articles to be refunded. The merchants, however, suggested that much red tape could be avoided if no such tax is levied, provided evidence is produced showing the purpose of the purchase.

Figures Given
The committee was told that retail sales in Arkansas during 1934 aggregated $216,000,000, which would produce more than $6,000,000 by a three per cent sales tax as embodied in the bill aimed at obtaining additional aid for schools, unemployables, pensions and charitable institutions.

The committee deferred consideration of Senator Ashley's proposed constitutional amendment changing the state property tax millage for schools from three to nine and lowering the local district tax from 18 to 12 mills. The figures on retail sales then were given to the committee by the chairman of the Merchants Committee, Ne land Blass of Little Rock, who pointed out that the three per cent tax would yield nearly $2,000,000 more than was needed.

Senator Thompson and other members of the committee said it was contemplated that the excess would be used in lieu of taxes exempted on homesteads, as proposed in measures in both houses which would be submitted as proposed constitutional amendments.

Following a discussion on tax brackets for items of different value, the merchants agreed to prepare a table of tax brackets and present it to the committee.

Four Bills Recommended

The committee will recommend that the following four bills pass:

S. B. No. 96 (Gathings). To make county school funds payable first for maintenance of the schools and then for debts.

S. B. No. 38 (Thompson). To provide for the election of district school directors.

S. B. No. 95 (Milam). To provide for the issuance of revolving loan bonds and provide for funds to lend districts to enable them to purchase their bonds.

S. B. No. 132 (Johnson). To create a state library commission.

The legislature will reconvene this afternoon, the house at 1 and the senate at 2.

manner, had started his questioning with the avowed determination of "proving" Hauptmann. There were moments, indeed, when his prediction seemed about to come true, but Hauptmann, though weakened by the attack, clung desperately to his story.

Again and again Wilentz, manifestly impatient, called on Hauptmann to "tell the truth." At a point when it seemed to everybody that Wilentz had victory in his hands he lost the opportunity.

Hauptmann appeared to be weakening. He had admitted lying to District Attorney Foley last September 19 about the notation of Dr. Condon's address and telephone number on a piece of trimming in the Hauptmann closet.

"This is funny to you, isn't it? You are having a lot of fun," Wilentz began.

"No, absolutely not," Hauptmann replied.

"You are having a lot of fun with me, aren't you?" the prosecutor demanded.

"No," Wilentz said, "you are doing very well, you are smiling at me every five minutes."

"No," Hauptmann protested.

Q. No, certainly, you shouldn't. You think you are bigger than every body, don't you? A. No. But I know I am innocent.

ed by the bill.

No provision for financing the state Relief Commission is made in the bill, and none is suggested in the governor's message. The bill was drafted by the State Emergency Relief Commission, which was appointed by the governor, and was discussed by the commission in detail at a meeting held in his office January 11.

New Vitamin Will Help Cure Insane

Vitamin "B" Produced Artificially in Absolutely Pure Form

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Columbia University Sunday night announced discovery of the chemical formula of vitamin B, an epochal step toward preservation of health. B is the nerve vitamin, without which nerves go to pieces. The discovery gives hope of more effective treatment of nerve disorders.

It also promises an improved approach to some of the puzzles of insanity for vitamin B is in use experimentally at the Elgin, (Ill.) State Hospital for the Insane as a remedy for dementia praecox, one of the most widespread forms of insanity.

Importance of the Columbia discovery lies in the fact that vitamin B soon can be synthesized in pure form, that is, artificially produced from the chemicals which compose it.

Until now vitamin B has been available only from foodstuffs such as tomatoes, spinach, legumes, eggs, yeast, liver, kidney and other glandular tissues. Its extraction was difficult and it has not been obtained entirely pure. Synthesis will produce the pure vitamin, and it is expected to do so in virtually unlimited quantities.

The formula discovered by Robert R. Williams of Columbia, is described in the journal of the American Chemical Society.

Atoms forming this vitamin are carbon, nitrogen, hydrogen, oxygen and sulphur. This has been known for a long time, but the discovery is how to hook them together so that they will be vitamin B.

Williams learned the secret of this arrangement by extracting a comparatively large quantity of pure vitamin B. He got it from rice polishings—one sixth of an ounce of pure vitamin.

He has worked on the problem for 20 years. He started in the Philippines where he was a member of the United States Bureau of Science.

SNAKE BITES HORSE

selling water. A charge of 25 cents was made for watering a team of horses; 25 cents a head for oxen, and 25 cents a barrel to those who brought containers. Water was drawn from a deep well in two barrels that were raised and lowered alternately by a windlass, called by miners, a whim.

A horse was hitched to a long pole attached to the whim. As the horse moved in a circle a barrel would come up. It had to be emptied quickly into a trough before the horse who knew his business, reversed his direction and started to raise the other barrel.

Filling the watering trough was a regular morning chore. That done, I was free to entertain myself in any way I chose with the means at hand. It was a lonely, monotonous existence out there on that wind-swept desert; but it was a job, and I resolved to make the best of a situation into which I had been placed by one of destiny's accidents.

A dozen horses belonging to Laborer grazed in nearby arroyos and foothills. Once a day, they were herded in for water by a young stallion we called Dexter. He also drove them in to be corralled at night.

They Saved Horse
One day when Laborer was with me, the horses came in, Dexter as usual, bringing up the rear. His head was swollen to an enormous size. Laborer instantly recognized the trouble as rattlesnake bite. He proceeded to rope Dexter and throw him to the ground. I sat on his neck while Laborer administered treatment. The snake's fangs had made a small wound just above Dexter's mouth. Laborer jabbed the wound several times with a knife, then applied baking powder which immediately foamed with a greenish color. Laborer would wipe off the foam and apply more powder. He kept this up until the foaming ceased. He then covered the wound with gun powder and touched it off. This whole process was repeated three times at two-hour intervals. Next morning the swelling had subsided and Dexter was permitted to return to the range.

Another time while I was alone, two men rode up and asked if I had seen two Mexicans riding horses by the station. They described the horses in detail. When I replied in the negative, the strangers dismounted, sat down and waited. About sundown we saw two horsemen approaching. They were Mexicans. The strangers got up, went inside the house and stationed themselves near a window. When the Mexicans rode up, two rifle shots rang out and two dead horses, thieves toppled to the ground. The strangers dragged the bodies a short distance from the station and buried them. After requesting me to tell Laborer when he returned, what had happened, they calmly rode away into the desert waste.

The adobe buildings would often get so hot during the daytime that I couldn't sleep inside. Adobe walls hold heat for hours, so I would make my bed on the sand in the patio. One night a scorpion stung me in the palm of my hand. I awoke yelling for my hand felt as if it had been stung by a dozen hornets. Fortunately, the scorpion wasn't of the deadly poisonous variety, and I soon recovered.

Cook Arrives
While sitting in front of the corral one afternoon I saw a long horseman coming toward me. I thought of the time I trudged up Texas Hill almost delirious from thirst. I wondered if the stranger was suffering from lack of water. He had a canteen filled with water, but he was tired and hungry. He informed me that he was a professional cook. That was the best news he could have imparted. He had served at sea, and recently had been employed in a mining camp. I hired him on the spot. His name was Charlie Alzamor, a Russian by birth. Charlie stayed with me two months and when I quit my job and went back to Tucson, he went with me.

In time, Charlie opened a pan cake stand in Tucson and lived there for years. He was known to every one as "Frying Pan Charlie." His specialty was hot cakes. He was a likeable sort of fellow but one of the most imprudent men I have ever known. He was often forced to ask a customer to pay for cakes in advance so he could buy flour. More than once he failed to resist placing the money on the high card, and when he lost he wouldn't return to his stand until the customer had grown tired waiting and left. About two years ago I read an article in a paper telling of his death.
